

Older people's experiences of sight loss in care homes

This publication summarises findings from research commissioned by Thomas Pocklington Trust to investigate the experiences of older people with sight loss in care homes. The research was carried out by Dr Lizzie Ward and Laura Banks from the University of Brighton

Summary findings

Older people with sight loss in care homes experience a range of challenges. Many people experience a loss of independence and a reduced ability to engage in meaningful activities. There is a need for more support and resources to help older people with sight loss in care homes. The research highlights the importance of staff training and support, and the need for more accessible information and resources. Older people with sight loss in care homes often experience a loss of social contact and a reduced ability to engage in meaningful activities. There is a need for more support and resources to help older people with sight loss in care homes. The research highlights the importance of staff training and support, and the need for more accessible information and resources.

Older people with sight loss in care homes experience a range of challenges. Many people experience a loss of independence and a reduced ability to engage in meaningful activities. There is a need for more support and resources to help older people with sight loss in care homes. The research highlights the importance of staff training and support, and the need for more accessible information and resources.

e er e t e re

e e er a ba ru u ereye

) ere e o a are e

e y e u r a a a b e r o are e a

e y e u r r o

Meaningful activities

ere a ee ~ ab u t a ea u a y ea

Authors and terms

Dr. Thomas Pocklington, Thomas Pocklington Trust, 100, The Quadrant, London, W1A 0AB, UK. Email: thomas.pocklington@tptrust.co.uk

How to obtain further information

For more information on this research, please contact the research team at research@tptrust.co.uk or visit our website at www.tptrust.co.uk

For more information on the Trust, please contact the Trust at info@tptrust.co.uk or visit our website at www.tptrust.co.uk

Telephone: 020 7000 0000

Email: research@tptrust.co.uk

Web: www.tptrust.co.uk

About Thomas Pocklington Trust

Thomas Pocklington Trust is a charitable trust established in 1997. The Trust's primary purpose is to support research into the prevention and treatment of cancer. The Trust has funded a number of research projects and has supported the work of a number of leading cancer researchers. The Trust is currently funding research into the prevention and treatment of breast cancer.

The Trust is a registered charity and is governed by a board of trustees. The trustees are responsible for the overall management of the Trust and for ensuring that the Trust's funds are used in accordance with its charitable purposes. The Trust is a member of the Cancer Research Campaign and is also a member of the British Cancer Research Campaign.

